

Worldwide durability test

The development of vehicles for external markets requires the testing of vehicles in the most realistic conditions.

The purpose of our international durability programmes is to test the reliability of the vehicles in the destination markets by running them according to the most representative driving profiles, road and weather conditions.

Applus IDIADA provides a global service to manage these reliability tests in the countries in which the main car manufacturers are interested.